

OPTIMISTS SEE HOPE IN CHINA

New Consortium Is Real Chance for Order in Stricken Country.

NEW PARTY IN CONTROL
Success of Republic Depends Upon Aid From Outside.

By CHARLES EDWARD HOGUE
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)
PEKING, Aug. 10 (By mail).—Another of China's innumerable civil wars has come to a close and today the most optimistic of the nation's well-wishers profess to see a possibility that the new Four-Power Consortium will be able to bring order out of chaos in this stricken country.

The Anfuites, whose militaristic policies disrupted parliament and emptied the nation's treasury, are out. The Chihliites are in.

Whether the change in administration will mean any betterment of conditions is problematical. On one thing, however, everyone seems agreed; the consortium is China's real hope. If the business men and financiers of the United States, Great Britain, France and Japan see fit to finance the republic, direct the expenditure of the funds they advance for that purpose and stamp out militarism at the capital there is a good chance that it will be only a short time before China will have a government that is functioning normally.

Today the nation is a ship without a rudder. Without a constitution, a parliament or any genuine cohesion between the various provinces this vast country presents a spectacle almost as sad as that of Mexico. But with the overthrow of the Anfuites some hope is seen that the Chihli cabinet can be held in check and a repetition of former abuses prevented.

While the storms of war have been swirling about his head, President Hsu, who cannot be called a strong character, has been compelled to sit helplessly by. He will retain his chair as president while an effort is made to unite the various factions in a constitutional convention at Shanghai. As soon as a constitution can be agreed upon and adopted, elections will be held and a new parliament formed.

In the meantime, the secessionists at Canton have become so thoroughly embroiled among themselves that it is believed likely they will welcome an opportunity for compromise and participation in a general reorganization of the government.

CHILEAN SCHOOLS LACK SPIRIT

Miss Leonor Lopez Tells of University Life in South America.

"We do not have school spirit in Chile as you do here in the University of Missouri," said Miss Leonor Lopez in discussing the schools of her native country. Miss Lopez is an instructor in Spanish in the Romance language department of the University, and is a native of Santiago de Chile, South America. She came to this country three years ago and entered the University of Illinois from which she was graduated last spring with an A. B. degree. Miss Lopez was a member of the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority and president of the Woman's Cosmopolitan Club.

"I was even more frightened than the average freshman," confessed Miss Lopez, "when I first entered those big classes. Although I had studied enough English to understand what the instructors said, my tongue seemed stiff when I tried to answer. My social life accustomed me to the language more than anything else, and now I feel very much at home in the United States."

The University of Chile she said, has an approximate enrollment of seven thousand, and the degrees rank higher than those in the state universities in this country. The students are all athletic, and are especially fond of tennis and soccer. There are no fraternities and sororities, but literary organizations which help to draw the young people together.

"I promised my parents I would go back home at the end of two years," she replied when asked how she liked this country, "and now I am starting on my fourth year."

FAMOUS DRYS WILL GATHER

15th International Congress
Against Alcoholism to Meet.

GERMANS WILL ATTEND
Session Will Be Held in Washington, D. C., Sept. 21-22.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 14.—Wine growing states will doubtless be greatly interested in the attendance at the Fifteenth International Congress Against Alcoholism, of Dr. Eudo Monti, of Turin, chemist of international repute, discoverer of the process of desalcoholizing liquor whose studies have resulted in the application of the cold-pack method to the conservation of grape juice. Dr. Monti is now studying the use of the grape extract in the preparation of bread. It is stated his investigations have revolutionized the viticulture in France and Italy.

Among others who will participate in the Congress held in Washington, September 21-22, will be the first representatives from the new nations created by the Council of Versailles. Finland will send Dr. Matti-Helenius Seppala, the only prohibition commissioner, other than John F. Kramer, of the United States, in the world. Dr. Helenius is chief of the temperance division of the social ministry. Poland is sending her distinguished state attorney general, M. Glas, of Warsaw. Czechoslovakia has designated Professor Zmhral, of Prague. Yugoslavia is sending Dr. Stajich, of the Serbian Cabinet, head of the Department of child welfare and public charities.

Two of Germany's leading scientists appear at the International Congress as speakers, their entry being assured by action of the Secretary of State in granting them special permission to visit the United States. One of these, Prof. G. Aschaffenburg of Cologne, is director of the psychiatric clinic of Cologne. The other, Dr. A. Hollischer of Karlsruhe, is head of the Karlsruhe hospital for mental and nervous diseases, famous throughout the world.

From London will come Dr. Caleb Williams Saleeby, inventor of the steel trench helmet, leading authority of the world on eugenics, and at present chairman of the Birth Rate Commission of England. Poland will be represented on the program by a woman, Dr. S. Daszynska Golinska, who led the struggle for Polish independence years before the world war, a member of the faculty of law and social sciences of the University of Warsaw, who as illustrative of her opposition to race suicide has managed to rear a large family despite her many public activities.

Lars Larsen-Ledet, product of a race of peasants found only in the extreme northern part of Denmark, now a leading European journalist, author, and worker in behalf of total abstinence, will have an interesting story to tell of measures against alcoholism taken in Europe during the war. Mr. Larsen-Ledet, because of his position as a neutral in Denmark was allowed by the various Governments to make an exhaustive study of alcoholism during the war.

The United States will be represented by Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer, Secretary of the Navy Joseph Daniels, Mr. William Jennings Bryan, Federal Prohibition Commissioner John F. Kramer, former Commissioner of Internal Revenue Daniel C. Roper, former Congressman from Colorado, Edward T. Keating, U. S. Senator William S. Kenyon of Iowa; Gov. Carl E. Milliken of Maine, Dr. F. A. Baker, general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of America, and others, all leaders in their respective activities. The Secretary of State will address the opening session.

The Congress, being strictly scientific in character, passes no resolutions and commits the delegates to no program, so that it is expected there will be free expression of opinion, especially on topics touching the political.

'Just a step from anywhere'

THE uncertainty of this Fall weather only requires some sort of a light weight wrap to make one feel satisfactorily dressed. Then, too, FASHION, this season, has been very considerate in selecting light weight coats, sweaters and wool scarfs, to have comfort as well as smartness and youthful charm and grace.

What a secure satisfaction to know a sport coat of many colors and designs may be secured by little trouble, and at a surprisingly low price, too.

Then, equally jaunty and snappy, are the wool scarfs that will match any costume, to say nothing of the many sweaters that express true originality and sauciness.

FREDENDALL'S

I could easily see why the feminine sex spurns high shoes when I looked at the hosiery at ESTES. The silk and lace hose have their usual appeal to woman's love of the beautiful, and the wool ones are so sporty looking.

There are the heather mixtures in wool, and the plain colors in smooth or ribbed effects. And listen, my dears, $2.50 will buy a dandy pair.

PURE FOOD

is more than a matter of legislative enactment. Food preparations may still legally contain ingredients which the consumer, who takes an intelligent interest in his health, will not eat. The spirit behind the movement for better food is more or less effectively expressed in the Food Law, but the honest purveyor is not satisfied with a mere compliance with the letter of the law. Having caught the spirit he serves food at a quality often beyond legal requirement; he states what he is doing; and he patiently waits for public indifference to be replaced by public endorsement.
